Highway Plan To Committee

$7.3 Billion Program Suggests Way to Pay

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)-A $7.3 billion plan to improve Missouri highways was presented to a special legislative commission today along with suggested ways to pay the big bill.

The program was outlined in two reports-an engineering study of highway needs by the Automotive Safety Foundation of Washington and a look at financing methods by the University of Missouri.

Some bright fellow is going to win the hearts of the citizens of the free society someday by devising an acceptable substitute for the strike as a worker's economic weapon.

At best it is a wasteful device. After a major strike, the cost in lost production and lost wages is usually totted up. But seldom if ever does anyone try to figure how long the affected workers have to toil before their new gains-if any-balance their losses.

When big industries and the flow of basic goods are affected, the production loss to the nation can be serious. In the great competitive race with the Communist world, we can ill afford such slowdowns.

Beyond this, too, there are instances in which the strike weapon is in fact abused.

Fundamentally, it is conceived as the ultimate pressure device which workers can apply against employers whose resources are presumed to be so ample they could hold out indefinitely at the bargaining table.

In fairness to the general public, it should not be used to cripple a community, to endanger their health or their military security. Most unions are careful to stay within these

But occasionally some step beyond. The strike of three unions against the tugboat and ferry operations of 11 eastern railroads was such a case.

In essence this was a small strike over a small issue. They want the right to fix the size of crews on railroad tugs, the companies wish to retain the right to determine crew sizes flexibly. Only 660 workers were

The strikers went further. They chose to picket rail lines not directly involved in their operations, with the express purpose of putting the squeeze on New York's food supply and forcing its commuter transport to suffer major crippling. The net effect was also to handicap long distance rail opera-understanding between the Americas-something neglected of late. Farsighted Sen. William Fulbright of Arkansas long ago saw the importance of student exchange and has persuaded Congress to put up a modest amount of money for it. A University of the Americas could attract more and more students from North and South America and cement greater and firmer bonds between our neighbors. Good-will trips by Presidents and Vice Presidents may arouse friendship enthusiasm for a few days, but a university to which Latin nations contribute professors as well as students can build good will permanently. Oil Influences The Senate Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri is both pleasant and effective, does not get mad easily. But the other day in the secrecy of the Senate Democratic caucus, he told of an incident which had once made his blood boil. Symington told the story to illustrate something which has been burning up other Senators - the jockeying for position on committees by Vice President Lyndon Johnson for the purpose of protecting Texas oil. Oil and all that goes with it - campaign contributions and the 27-1/2 oil depletion allowance - have been the unseen but very potent factor in the appointment of key committee posts and the grumbling over oil attorney John

B. Connally, Johnson's likable ex-assistant, as Secretary of the Navy. What Symington told his fellow Democrats was that two years ago he had wanted to be appointed to a certain committee and cleared it with the chairman, who wanted him. He found he had the seniority to be appointed and fully expected to get it. Then he was asked how he stood on a certain bill, and replied frankly that he was opposed to it. Thereafter, Symington said, he was told by the "leadership" that he could not serve on two major committees at one time and was denied the appointment he wanted. Senators who listened to Symington knew that he was talking about the Appropriations Committee, and that the bill he had been asked about dealt with the oil depletion allowance. "The leadership" of course referred to Sen. Lyndon Johnson, now Vice President, Another significant committee switch took place last week, also because of oil. Senator Fulbright suddenly stepped down from ranking member of the Banking and Currency Committee and took a nonranking position on the Senate Finance Committee.

This might not seem important to most people, but to insiders it meant one thing-oil. Few Senators ever relinquish a No. 2 spot on an important committee like Banking and Currency without a reason. The Finance Committee, however, is the committee which passes on the oil depletion allowance. And Sen. Bill Proxmire of Wisconsin, a forthright battler against the oil depletion allowance, wanted a spot on the Finance Committee. He had tried to get it for more than two years, and under usual Senate custom was entitled to it.

The only way he could be blocked was by having a very senior Senator ask for it. Fulbright has that seniority. Furthermore, he is an oil Senator. He is a sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde Senator who occupies the lefty position of chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee but also goes down the line for oil. He was author of the Fulbright-Harris Natural Gas Bill. So Vice President Johnson arranged with Fulbright to step down from his key spot on Banking and Currency to a very junior spot on the Finance Committee - where he can help protect the oil depletion allowance

This blocked Proxmire who had sworn to close oil loopholes in the tax laws.

So operates oil politics on Capitol Hill.

tween citizens and their government by giving them a more immediate sense of understanding and participation. Watching a Kennedy news conference on TV will be the same as being at it except for the inability to ask questions. People will not only be able to observe their President but pass private judgment on him, his wisdom and his policies. Kennedy, of course, could be creating a trap for himself. If he makes a slip with the whole country watching, it's made. He could even create a disaster -remote as that seems-by a slip

Anyone who has been in Washington any time knows this. Kennedy has been here steadily since 1947, serving in Congress. Besides, he has demonstrated

But before he could be quoted directly or shown on the nation's TV screens, his press secretary, James Hagerty, had the right to change or ban anything he decided should not be reported or Still, White House newsmen who covered Eisenhower from the beginning do not recall that Hagerty ever in eight years cut anything of importance out of the word-byword transcript.

If something Eisenhower said might be open to misinterpretation, Hagerty at times put out an explanatory note, along with the transcript, to set the record straight.

Nor did he cut anything of importance out of the TV films which were shown later.

We Must Await Kennedy's Clarification of Address

By PETER EDSON Washington Correspondent Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON-President Kennedy's inaugural address is not being taken here as something to file and forget after one hearing or reading.

It is providing a good exercise for anyone who will take the trouble to sit down with pencil and paper and try to translate the President's almost mystical generalities of high purpose into specific language, naming names and writing programs instead of leaving them to inference.

Jumping right into the middle of the text, what is it that the new leader of the nation is saying to the Russians?

"We offer not a pledge, but a request: That both sides begin anew and quest for peace." The Russians, as the self-styled champions of the "peace-loving nations," may seize upon this and say they are ready and always have been making this quest, but that the capitalist warmongers have always defeated the effort. Two of President Kennedy's short sentences are being widely quoted:

"Let us never negotiate out of fear. But let us never fear to negotiate.

Russia's Khrushchev may use this language to urge with renewed vigor a summit conference. The President does not say where, when, or how he will negotiate. And to those Americans who consider any negotiation with the Russians futile, this is not a promising prospect. As to what shall be negotiated, the Presidet suggests first, "precise proposals for inspection and control of arms.'

The United States has, for 15 years, been making precise proposals to the Russians for arms inspection and control. The first proposal, the Baruch plan, even offered to share with the Russians the secret of atomic energy, before they discovered it for them-

This was certainly an offer to 'let both sides join to invoke the wonders of science, instead of its terrors," as the President implores with such high idealism. But the Russians rejected the most magnanimous Baruch plan, as they have rejected all subsequent American offers. They have not been interested in inspection and control of arms. Their slogan now is "general and complete disarmament" - immediately - with inspection and control worked out later. This approach President Kennedy seems to reject out of hand when he declares:

"We dare not tempt them with weakness. For only when our arms are sufficient beyond doubt can we be certain beyond doubt that they will never be employed."

But assuming that by some miracle of diplomacy or a change of Russian heart this noble purpose could be achieved, what would be next? The President prescribes "Let both sides join in creating a new world where the strong are just and the weak are secure and the peace (will be) preserved forever ' No one - Republican, Democrat, conservative, liberal, Socialist or Communist - can quarrel with the Edealism of this great goal. But when the Communist countries maintain that the capitalist nations are the oppressors of the weak and the democracies maintain that the totalitarian states are never just, there is no common ground.

And since the Russians and their satellites do not recognize a rule of law but only a rule of force, the attainment of even a temporary peace becomes a distant dream. Even Kennedy recognizes this will not be attained in his administration, perhaps not in his lifetime. But he wants to begin. And that is considered the essence of his inaugural message. This is a speech that may be more widely acclaimed in foreign countries for its inspirational qualities and its words of hope for old allies, new nations and those peoples of Latin America and "half the globe struggling to break the bonds of mass misery.' For America there is only a call for strength and sacrifice to maintain "those human rights to which this nation has always been committed." Anyone not able to interpre the specifics of that will have to wait until the President delivers his own State of the Union and later messages to Congress.

Scramble to Cut Car Production

DETROIT (AP) - The nation's automakers are still scrambling to cut production to meet the slow sales pace of January

Through the first three weeks of the year the industry built only 57 per cent as many cars as in the similar period a year ago and further cutbacks have been reported. Last year the factories were going all out to make up for production lost in late 1959 because of the prolonged steel strike. But output, while high, was not 50 per cent above normal. Present schedules are said to call for 433,600 cars to be built this month. These figures represent a cut of 40,400 from already trimmed down schedules. Indications are, however, that actual production this month may be even less than the most recent cut and it is certain to be the lowest for any January since 1952. General Motors is coming closest to matching last year's pace. Its output through the first three weeks equalled 67 per cent of year-ago production. Ford built
